The Vanderbilt Law School International Legal Studies Program awards a scholarship in memory of the late Raymonde I. Paul, who developed a diverse practice in international law and participated extensively in the International Federation of Women Lawyers. The $20,000 scholarship is awarded to an entering student with a demonstrated interest in international law and renews automatically for each year of attendance.

In addition to the scholarship, Raymonde Paul Scholars are afforded certain perquisites through the International Legal Studies Program, such as: a guaranteed place in International Law Practice Lab during the semester of the Scholar’s choice; priority selection for VIP seating and treatment as a student representative of the International Legal Studies program (e.g., dinner with the State Department Legal Advisor, lunch with CENTCOM Commander General David Petraeus, lunch with the National Security Advisor); a guaranteed summer stipend to support volunteer experience; a guaranteed professional mentorship during law school with personally tailored internship / externship placement opportunities as well as priority career placement advice and assistance; priority consideration for Vanderbilt Law Fellow seat on the Nashville Committee on Foreign Relations, one of the 32 American Committees on Foreign Relations across the United States; and priority consideration for ILS travel to international events, e.g. the International Association of Genocide Scholars.

To be considered for the Raymonde Paul Scholarship available in the current year you must complete this form and return it by January 10th along with all application materials. Please attach an essay (less than 1,000 words) describing: 1) your interest in international legal studies, 2) your international experience, 3) your career goals.
